ALEXANDRIA HAPPENINGS.

ALEXANDRIA HAITENINGS.

There is some suspicion that the burning to death of the negro woman, Hattie Davis, on Sunday night may not have been the result of an accident. The coroner's inquest held yesterday showed that Charles Kanuss, a plumber of Washington, and a negro woman named Mary Houck had spent the evening in the Davis woman's house and when they left they had taken the key with them and locked the door with a padlock on the outside.

The Davis woman when found was sitting in a chair by the door, where she tried to get out, but could not. Before the coroner's jury Mary Houck said that the dead woman had asked her to take the key and lock the door from the outside, as she might be in bed when they came back.

The jury were not at all satisfied with her story, so Dr. William R. Purvis, coroner, had her locked up and has sent to Washington for the arrest of Knauss, who will be taken before the grand jury when it resumes its investigation this morning. A cordial invitation is extended to the general public, and all will be permitted to cast their ballots on a payment of 10 cents as registration fee. The total proceeds thus secured will be turned over to · The Helping Hand Club held a business The Helping Hand Chib held a business meeting Saturday right at the home of one of its members, Mass Blanche Hill. Handsome Women in the Boxes Attracted More the Attention of the Crowd Than the Horses.

New York, Nov. 11 .- Society and the horse show opened their annual function at Madison Square Garden today. During the daylight hours the horse had the best of it and all eyes were on the tan bark ring. In the evening, however, when the electric lights were on and the boxes were filled with handsome women brilliantly clad and radiantly jeweled and well-groomed and radiantly jeweled and well-groomed men in evening dress, the tan bark was the dullest part of the spectacle.

In the eleven years of the National Horse Show Association no such gorgeous opening has been recorded. For weeks in advance the boxes and most desirable seats have been bespoken and such seats as fell into speculators' hands brought fancy prices. The general public had 3,500 baleony and gallery seats unreserved and they were all filled early.

and loveliness anything that has ever been seen in Washington. In addition to their exhibition of fine chrysanthemums, there are displayed a rare array of orchids— a specialty with the firm—roses, carna-tions, etc. Nor is it alone the flowers bemselves that are most attractive; it is the artistic effect of the whole arrangement, making a veritable floral picture. This skill is the result of years of study and experience in the floral art. The sight is a revelation to all except those familiar with the work of Messrs. Small in this and other cities. Tall palms, dotted with tiny electric lights, placed here and there; erchids and delicate ferns intermingle in graceful profusion, and Egyptian vases and ribbon effects complete the floral picture.
